ANNUAL REPORT

2017

This annual report shows how funds entrusted to UNFPA have enabled us to protect and promote the health and rights of thousands of women and young people and enable them to realize their full potential

Delivering a world where every pregnancy is wanted, every childbirth is safe and every young person's potential is fulfilled

Building sustainability as the main challenge

The year 2017 was a good year: a year of challenges, changes and consolidating the results of our 2012–2017 programme.

This year was a year of planning: how to make a difference in people’s lives, how to empower more women and young people, how to help a more equitable and inclusive society.

In 2017 our humanitarian response to the conflict in Eastern Ukraine extended towards the rest of country as we embraced the challenge of response to gender-based violence nation-wide.

We worked for gender equality, decent work and economic growth, quality education and good health and well-being for millions of people in Ukraine.

Together with our donors and partners we helped more people change their lives for the better and get closer to our shared dream of a country that cares to people’s needs regardless of gender, age and social status.

Although this report shows you numbers, please remember that behind the numbers are people. So join us for a quick glance at the impact and progress we have made for them together with you.

4 Hands Happiness project

- 5 successful events (“Daddy, Read to Me!”, “Dads, Kids, Dance”, 3 “Festivals of Happy Families”) aimed at building more respectful and happy relationships between men and women, as well as supporting men’s involvement as equitable, responsive and non-violent fathers organized. Hundreds of people together with 9 celebrity fathers participated in these events showing their support to the cause, while learning equitable approaches to family care and spending time with their families.
- Large-scale information campaigns in social media delivered important messages of equality and responsibility in childcare and domestic work to more than 7 million people.

Addressing gender stereotypes in education

- “Hack4good” IT and design hackathon brought together 30 young women from all over Ukraine to participate in a design thinking workshop and develop digital solutions to promote and expand girls participation in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics).
- A series of training organized for the authors of textbooks and representatives of publishing houses together with the Institute of Education Content Modernization to make textbooks and teaching materials more gender-sensitive.

Adolescents and Youth

- UNFPA co-organized and supported the “Ukrainian Pact for Youth 2020” initiative which creates a platform where the business, the educational sector and the government are uniting their efforts to provide young people with the opportunity to develop the skills, knowledge and mindsets they need to be successful in their career and life.
- As a part of the “Pact”, UNFPA conducted 5 business-youth forums “WOW effect from collaboration”, where more than 400 young people from the cities of Kremenchuk, Odesa, Lutsk, Dnipro and Kharkiv met with representatives of local and international businesses and received practical information and skills for building a successful career and finding their first job.
- 26 new local private companies joined the “Pact”, committing to create new employment opportunities and open internships for young people at the local level.

- A total of 385 partnerships were created between businesses and the educational sector which would allow to provide first employment opportunities to more than 13 thousand young people.
- A number of local initiatives supported in Poltava region, where around 5000 young people received important information on healthy lifestyle, life skills, consequences of risky behaviours and trained their skills to develop healthy life habits.
- UNFPA supported the organization of the Inter-regional Youth Forum “Youth, Peace and Security” that brought together around 230 young activists from all regions of Ukraine, who brainstormed on how to promote young people’s participation in peacebuilding efforts at all levels (family, school, community, and local, regional and national governance), as well as improved their knowledge and skills to prevent, manage and resolve conflict and maintain peace.

Sexual and Reproductive Health

- 3 Mobile Medical Teams provided quality free of charge reproductive health care services to 2,422 women and girls in most remote rural areas of Luhansk region.
- 32 fetal monitors were installed in maternity hospitals in the east of Ukraine. These monitors help to save around 7,600 infants annually, ensuring early detection of potentially fatal conditions in newborn babies.
- UNFPA delivered 3 infant incubators to the maternity hospitals in the east of Ukraine. This equipment helps save 900 lives of prematurely born babies yearly.
- UNFPA trained over 200 doctors of different profiles in modern methods of prevention and diagnostics of sexually transmitted infections (STIs)/HIV. Doctors also received knowledge and skills on youth –friendly approach in their work, including basics of teenage psychology, anti-stigma approach, prevention of gender-based violence in youth environments and modern methods of family planning.
- UNFPA delivered 68 special reproductive medical kits to maternity hospitals, which ensured that 10,760 women received quality health care during normal and complicated deliveries, caesarean sections and other surgical interventions.
- UNFPA distributed 4,594,000 male condoms to prevent sexually transmitted infections and HIV transmission among the population most at risk living in areas along the contact line and settlements with heavy military presence.
- UNFPA supplied sterile examination kits for reproductive health care to hospitals located close to the contact line in Donetsk/Luhansk regions and operating under dire conditions, ensuring that 32,000 women in need of health care received safe, quality and free of charge help.
- UNFPA established 10 emergency reproductive health care cabinets along the contact line in the Donetsk/Luhanska oblasts which continuously provide women in need with good quality, inclusive, confidential, 24/7, and free-of-charge reproductive health care services. Around 15,000 women and girls have already received essential help, including family planning, sexually transmitted infections/HIV diagnosis and treatment, emergency post-rape assistance, as well as free essential medicines and commodities to prevent maternal morbidity and mortality.

Olga and hundreds of thousands of Ukrainian women who are survivors of GBV now have a 24/7 hotline to call for support, mobile teams of psychosocial support, 5 shelters to stay safe and new police department "Polina" who are on their side, and a justice system that takes GBV seriously
